Dear Agony Aunt,

I don't know what to do. I'm at my wit's end! My dog has spots all over his body and no matter what I do we can't seem to shift them. He's scratching constantly because they're itchy, which makes them so sore. What should I do?

Exasperated in Bournemouth

Dear Exasperated,

What a dilemma you seem to be facing! I appreciate that this must be very distressing for you and your canine friend but don't worry, I believe I can be of some assistance.

First and foremost, it's important to get expert advice. If you haven't already, be sure to take a trip to your local veterinary surgery, who will take a look and offer you professional advice. Without seeing your pooch in person, it can be very difficult to diagnose the problem.

In the meantime, we need to get your four-legged friend some urgent relief from his symptoms. I would suggest applying some cream to sooth those itchy spots because that may prevent him from scratching and making them even worse. Applying a cone around his head may also help if he is licking at the wounds.

Finally, spots are often a sign of an allergic reaction. To rule this out, feed him a diet of boiled chicken and rice for the next few days and monitor his spots. If this is the cause of his spots, his skin should begin to improve.

Good luck with your pup!

Agony Aunt
